OUR STORY

A journey through Ireland with modern tastes

Here in Cobh, we are lucky enough to be surrounded by the sea and to live amongst some of the most fertile farmland on the island of Ireland.

Our menu reflects our desire to use seafood caught near our coast and ingredients grown on this land so that we can offer the best of traditional and modern Irish cuisine.

Millions of men, women and children emigrated from Ireland and, for most, our town was “the last drop” before they boarded ships for a new life away from their homeland. They had their last meal in Ireland here in Cobh and, when they or their descendants returned, they brought new ingredients and flavours home, which are an integral part of Irish cuisine today.

We hope you find something on our menu which reminds you of the best of Ireland and which sparks thoughts of your ancestors, their emotions when they arrived in “the last drop” but also life in Cobh, County Cork today.
